

ABSTRACT

Provided is a differential pair interconnection apparatus for providing a differential signal on a printed circuit board having signal paths for high-speed differential signals to an external circuit and providing a signal inputted from 5 the external circuit to the printed circuit board without any signal distortion. According to the differential pair interconnection apparatus of the present invention, there can be provided two separate physical channels without impedance mismatching.